Mummies

The ancient Egyptians believed that after a person died, their soul would be reunited with their body in the afterlife. They thought that the journey to the afterlife was long and dangerous, so Egyptians had special burial and funeral practices to make sure that the person would be able to complete the trip.

The first step was to embalm, or preserve, the dead body by making a mummy. It took 70 days to mummify a body. The embalmers started by removing all the organs, including the stomach, intestine, liver, lungs and even the brain. In fact, collective.com

Grizzly bears (Ursus arctos horribilis) are a huge, powerful predator that can be found in North America, Europe and Asia.

Grizzlies have a large hump on their backs and sharp long claws. Grizzlies are solitary animals but they do gather in large numbers by rivers when the salmon swims upstream to spawn (lay their eggs).

Brown bears, also called brown bears, feed mainly on nuts, fruit, leaves and shoots but will eat rodents, deer and elk.

During the winter, grizzly bears hibernate for 5 – 8 months which is why they must eat all of food in the summer so they can survive. Female grizzlies give birth when they are still hibernating in their dens. There are usually two cubs in a litter and they are born hairless. They snuggle into their mother's fur for warmth and start to feed on milk. When the mother has woken up from her long sleep, she leaves the den with her babies. Mountain lions and wolves are predators of young bear cubs but mother grizzly bears are very protective of their young so they usually survive. Cubs will stay with their mothers for 3 years until they are ready to fend for themselves.nationalgeographic.com
